The short story behind Schools for Haiti

Schools for Haiti (SFH) launched in 2006 with 12 children. It was born out of the vision of Haitian born Daniel Michel who wanted to start a Christian school in his village of Montrouis, (pronounced Mo Wee) which is 57km north of Port-au-Prince.

Daniel was in the United States learning how to operate a drilling rig to then return and drill for water in Haiti. Through connections he made while in the states he shared his vision and out of that Schools for Haiti was founded.

The first year was very successful, so much so that SFH was supporting over 60 children with four teachers by year-end. It will be nine years this September and now SFH has approximately 400 students in four schools with a quality education and a nutritious meal every school day.

Please join us at the Marriot and hear the larger story and the opportunities SFH is planning in 2016 to expand their impact.
